

Transit-Oriented Communities

a Blueprint for Bellingham

A Presentation of Student Work

Tuesday, March 8, 2011 6:30 PM
City Hall Council Chambers

The overarching goal of Transit-Oriented Communities is to provide housing and transportation choices that give residents access to homes, jobs, recreation opportunities, shopping, and services to meet their daily needs, without having to rely on a motorized personal vehicle. This has the long-term result of increasing the quality of life in urban residential areas, reducing the cost of development, lessening the environmental impacts of development, and reducing transportation and energy-related greenhouse gas emissions.

A Study of 6 Sites

Cordata Station Community | Fairhaven Terminal Community |
South Campus Community | NE Downtown Community
North State Street Community | James Street Community

Urban Transition Studio | 2011 UTS Planning Studio

Huxley College of the Environment, WWU; Bellingham Office of Planning and Community Development; Sustainable Connections